
Subject: Re: Switch between parallel tracks

Posted by christian.rahmig on Fri, 17 Aug 2018 08:24:29 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Dear Alberto,

Am 16.08.2018 um 19:29 schrieb Alberto Burguillo Ruiz:

- > [...] there is one
- > track representing both ways (upwards and downwards tracks).
- > It raised the question of how to model the section that I
- > marked in the attached image.

the railML element <track> is used to model one railway track. A double track railway line will be modelled using two <track> elements.

Consequently, the track section you marked in your example, is also an own <track>. For more information about the different types of tracks, please have a look at our Wiki [1].

[1] <https://wiki.railml.org/index.php?title=IS:track>

Best regards

Christian

--

Christian Rahmig - Infrastructure scheme coordinator

railML.org (Registry of Associations: VR 5750)

Phone Coordinator: +49 173 2714509; railML.org: +49 351 47582911

Altplauen 19h; 01187 Dresden; Germany www.railml.org
