
Subject: Re: [railML2] adding new element <area> for the mapping of track sections
Posted by Torben Brand on Fri, 21 May 2021 16:39:01 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Christian Rahmig <coord@infrastructure.railML.org> wrote:

> Dear Torben,
>
> the idea was not to replace <area> with <border>, but to > limit the types of elements that are referenced via the > child element <area / isLimitedBy> to only <border> elements > (instead of all the various infrastructure elements). What > do you think?
>
> Best regards
> Christian

Hi Christian,

Thanks for clarifying. My argument #3 still stands: area/isLimitedBy@ref should be able to reference existing elements that act as borders (like for area@type=«trackSection» the reference to <trackSectionBorder> as borders) This is quite common for ocsElements. I think it would be redundant to have to model the borders again on top of the ocsElements.

--

TOBR
